Description

NED Capital is recruiting an Independent Non-Executive Director for the board of a statutory representative body for general practice in the South of England. The organisation represents GPs and their practices across several hundred surgeries, speaking for them in dealings with NHS commissioners and other bodies, and supporting practices and individual GPs through a period of significant change in primary care.

The board is looking for an independent voice from outside general practice. It wants someone with a strong record of leading change, who can bring perspective from another sector while understanding the pressures on GPs and the wider health system. You do not need to be a clinician. You do need a genuine interest in health, and ideally in general practice and primary care.

This is a part-time board seat of around five hours a month, with an annual fee of around £10,000. It suits a senior leader, perhaps a current or former chief executive, who wants a board role where their experience of change and stakeholder influence will make a visible difference.

Responsibilities

Sit on the board as an independent non-executive director and take a full part in its decisions on strategy, priorities and the use of resources.
Bring constructive, independent challenge to the board and the executive team, drawing on experience from outside general practice.
Support the board through organisational change, helping it set direction, test plans and keep delivery on track.
Help the organisation build its influence with commissioners, NHS bodies and other stakeholders, so that the voice of local general practice is heard.
Contribute to good governance, including how the board manages risk, measures performance and holds itself to account.
Work closely with the Chair and act as a sounding board to the senior team on matters outside their own experience.
Represent the organisation where needed and uphold its reputation with the practices and GPs it serves.

Qualifications

A strong track record of leading change at senior level, ideally as a chief executive or a member of an executive team.
Senior leadership experience from any sector, public, private or not-for-profit.
A genuine interest in health, and ideally in general practice and primary care.
Proven ability to engage and influence stakeholders, including organisations with competing interests.
The judgement to challenge constructively while supporting the executive team.
An understanding of good governance. Previous board or non-executive experience is welcome but not essential.

Independence from the organisation and from general practice locally, so you can bring a genuinely outside view.
Able to commit around five hours a month, including board meetings and preparation.

Job Benefits

An annual fee of around £10,000 for a commitment of about five hours a month.
A board seat with real influence over how general practice is represented and supported across the region.
The chance to apply your experience of change to one of the most pressured parts of the health system.
A flexible time commitment that fits alongside an executive career or a non-executive portfolio.
Close working with the Chair and a board that wants independent challenge.
